TRAINS CRASH TOGETHER.

Rear End Collision Results in Bad Smash-up.---One Killed and Nineteen Injured.

A bad wreck occured on the P. & L. E. this morning, when two trains going at a fast rate of speed, crashed together just below Fayette City. The accident which was due to the negligence of a fireman, took place on a sharp curve, it being impossible for the train crews to see the danger until too late to avoid the crash.

The mail clerk on the train was the only one killed outright, although nineteen others were more or less seriously injured and were immediately taken to the hospital at Pittsburg. The body of the dead mail clerk was removed to the morgue at Fayette City. Considering the manner in which cars and engines were demolished, it is nothing short of a miracle that the loss of life was no greater than it is. Both engines are a total wreck, also the baggage car of the passenger and several of the freight cars, which are piled up one on the other. The track is also torn up for some distance. The wreck train is on the scene, but it will be some time before traffic can be resumed.

Pretty Social Event.

A very pretty social event took place at the Union hotel at Webster last evening, a number of friends gathering there and spent a very pleasant time. The event was in honor of the parents of Mrs. James Conroy, who are spending a week in town with their daughter. Various amusements were indulged in, music being furnished by some of the party. About 11 o'clock a most delicious lunch was served and those present report a decidedly pleasant evening. The guests were Mr and Mrs. James Conroy, Mrs. Conroy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Vogel, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Vogel, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Burke and Miss Alva Vogel.

"Dora Thorne" recognized as "the sweetest story ever told" will be presented by the Van Dyke & Eaton Company tonight. The story itself is one that will always live because of its inmate truth and its masterly presentation of one of the oldest problems of life. No human being could possibly witness it without feeling better in his heart. Its influence for good has already charmed the supersensative and its charming pathos has filled the hearts of all and made life seem worth the living. A play that every mother, boy and girl should see is "Dora Thorne."

CATCHING TURTLES.

Methods Used by the Fishermen of the Tropics.

Turtles are always captured at night and usually on moonlight ones. This is the time they go on the shore to lay their eggs. They select a smooth, sandy beach, dig holes in the sand, deposit their eggs there and leave them to be hatched by the heat of the sand. When the turtles are on shore for this purpose hunters come upon them, and they are easily overtaken, for turtles are slow movers. The hunters have not a very strenuous undertaking. All that is necessary to be done is to turn the turtles on their backs and leave them until the next day, when they are removed.

Another more curious way of catching turtles is by fishing by the remora, a fish found in the tropical waters. The popular name of this fish and the one by which the children of those countries call them is the sucking fish. This name is given to them on account of a disk on their heads, by which they can attach themselves to any smooth surface, like the side of a shark, a ship or the shell of a turtle. This disk is like the soft leather "suckers" that are popular with schoolboys. When this fish has once attached himself to any thing you can pull him to pieces rather than force him to release his hold.

Turtle hunters go in boats and carry several of these remoras in tubs. When they see a turtle and get near him the sucker is sent after him. He is held by the ring on his tail, which in turn is attached by a stout cord. Soon the fish is securely fastened to the shell of the turtle, and turtle and fish are hauled into the boat together. Once in the air the remora loosens his hold and is dropped back into the tub to rest until another turtle is sighted.—Washington Star.

"Then you may get the senatorship?" asked Marion. Candless gave a little laugh.

"It ought to be better than that," he declared. "This investigation will attract attention all over the country. It might even be good for the governorship."

"But you won't get the senatorship this election, will you?" persisted the girl. Candless shook his head.

"We are only fairly getting under way," he explained patiently. "I suspect the committee will sit after Christmas."

"But I thought you were the whole investigation," she persisted. "What has the committee to do? Can't you hurry it up?"

"I am only one of a committee of five," he said. "I am doing most of the work, but these things cannot be hurried."

"You know now that they all stole," she persisted.

"But the facts must be legally set forth. We cannot rush it through."

"I wish you could," she whispered. "Then we could be married at once."

"I know it, dear," he answered tenderly. "I would give anything to hurry it up, but we must wait."

Harrington, strolling across the ballroom floor, heard and smiled as he asked Candless for a ten minute chat. The younger man went off, proud to be seen in conference with the man who really ruled the destinies of his party.

Three months before Candless would have shouted at the suggestion that he might be sent to the senate from his state. He was merely a young attorney whose cleverness had gained for him a place in the state legislature. Then had come the water front investigation. He had been placed on the committee because the leaders supposed him to be "safe." To the surprise of every one, he had developed an ingenuity at cross examination which had dragged out, bit by bit, the whole miserable story of the steal of the water front by the Cadiz and Southwestern.

It had been no part of the leaders' intentions that the story should come out, but it was too late now to call off the investigation. The public had been aroused.

"HARRINGTON HAS FIXED ALL THAT," HE EXPLAINED

To Candless it had seemed as if he were very near his goal, for he was to make Marion his wife when he had made his way. Surely his future was assured. If only the investigation had ended in time to run for the senatorship!

He wondered as he followed Harrington into the conservatory whether it were too late. An hour later, with sparkling eyes, he emerged from the conference and sought the girl.

"Is it good news, Hugh?" she asked as he led her toward the library.

"It couldn't be better," he cried exultingly. "I'll give you three guesses."

They were inside the library now, and the girl faced him. "Is it the senatorship?" she half whispered.

Candless nodded as he seized her about the waist and waltzed her across the floor to the library sofa. He was like a boy in his exuberance.

"Tell me all about it," she demanded as she curled herself upon the sofa. "Was that what Mr. Harrington wanted of you?"

"Nothing less," exulted Candless. "It has been decided that I am the most available candidate. They will run me for the state senate, with the assurance that I shall be sent to Washington."

"You'll be awfully busy with the campaign and the investigation," she lamented. "I'm afraid I will not see anything of you at all."

"Harrington has fixed all that," he explained. "They realize that I cannot handle both, so Varrick will take over the investigation. I wanted to keep on, but Harrington pointed out that I could not do both and that this was too good a chance at the senate to be lost."

"And are you going to give up the investigation," she gasped—"give up all that has been gained?"

"Varrick can carry it on," he said impatiently. "We have to make some sacrifices."

"And you are going to give up the fight before you have fairly begun?" she repeated. "You are going to turn your back on the investigation and let that fall through that you may go to Washington?"

"I told you Varrick would take my place," he said irritably. Marion turned and faced him.

"Hugh," she said simply, "do you really think that Mr Varrick will take your place?"

"Why not?" he asked. This was so different from what he had anticipated.

"I heard Mr. Colqhoun talking to father last night," she explained. "He said that the investigation was a complete surprise to both parties, that they had supposed there would be the usual whitewashing and that you had made it a real investigation."

"What of it?" demanded Candless.

"He said," went on Marion, "that he wondered how they would bribe you off; that he did not think money could do it. I was proud of you then, Hugh."

"Why not now?" he asked crossly. "Is it any disgrace to be elected to congress?"

"It is a disgrace when you turn your back on the people who look to you to right an evil—when you sell your honor for the nomination."

"But I am not selling my honor," he insisted. "I am simply obeying my party's call. I am doing, as I am told, for the best good of the party."

"You mean in running for congress, but the good of the party means dropping the investigation."

"Varrick will carry it on," he persisted.

"Not the way you would. Father said that if you kept on Harrington himself would land in jail. Hugh, don't you see that they are bribing you, just as surely as though they put money in your hands?"

The girl watched him curiously as he sprang to his feet and began to pace the floor. For a quarter of an hour nothing was said, then he turned to her abruptly.

"Marion," he said gently, "you are right. In my joy at attaining so soon what I have so eagerly longed for I have blinded myself to the real meaning of Harrington's offer. I see now that he wanted to get me out of the way. I will go and tell him I will not run."

He tenderly bent and kissed her, then rose to his feet and left the room, while the girl buried her head in the pillows.

Harrington stormed and threatened, but Candless would not be moved, and in the end word passed through the rooms that the announcement that Candless would abandon the investigation was premature.

Late that evening, after the guests had gone, Candless lingered in the library for a good night chat. "I'm sorry you are disappointed, Hugh," whispered Marion, "but we can wait, dear, until your honor comes without the taint of suspicion."

"Yes," he said quietly, "even though it may be a long wait I will keep my hands clean."

"Hugh," said Major Sharpless, entering through the curtains, "I don't think you need to wait, my boy. You have your triumph in being willing to forego perferment for your duty. That is a far greater triumph than the winning of the senatorship. You may have Marion whenever you want her."

Hugh turned to the girl. "I want her now," he said quietly, "for my strength lies in her."

How the Blood Moves in the Veins.

The principal cause of the movement of the blood in the veins is what the physiologists refer to as "the pressure from behind." By this is meant the capillary circulation, or a movement of the blood caused by the constant pumping action of the heart, which forces the current into and through the veins. To prevent the engorgement of the veins—that is, to prevent their becoming so filled with blood that their resistance would counterbalance the pressure from the arteries—each pulsation of the heart by emptying the right ventricle allows a part of the blood accumulated in the veins to be removed. In this way the backward resistance in the veins is kept inferior to the pressure of the arterial circulation. The venous circulation is also greatly aided by the action of the voluntary muscles. It is a well known fact that when a muscle contracts it thickens and becomes diminished in length. The effect of this lateral swelling is to compress the veins lying between the muscles, thus forcing the blood forward. Another peculiarity is the half moon shaped valves with which the veins are well provided. These "semilunar" valves open only toward the heart, making any backward movement of the blood into the venous system impossible.

The First Log Cabin In Kentucky.

Harrodsburg, the county seat of Mercer county, Ky., was the scene in the latter part of the eighteenth century of some very exciting episodes in the history of the early settlers in the young state. On June 16, 1774, Captain James Harrod of Virginia, who had brought a party of settlers to the new country, laid off a town site at Big Spring camp, where they had erected the first cabin ever built in Kentucky. They allotted to each man a half acre lot and a ten acre out lot. The town's first name was Harrodstown, but later this was changed to Harrodsburg. A clearing was made in the east end of the town boundary, and here it was that John Harman planted and raised the first corn that was known to have been grown in the state. Only a few weeks after this auspicious beginning of the town's promoters four of Harrod's men were ambushed by Indians. Jared Cowan was killed. The other men escaped, only one of them being injured.

TORTURING PAIN.

Half This Man's Sufferings Would Have Killed Many a Person, But Doan's Cured Him.

Thousands of grateful people are telling every day how Doan's Kidney Pills cured them of distressing and dangerous kidney and bladder troubles.

Yet other thousands are suffering every day from these same ills. Why? They are either very negligent or very skeptical. Neglect of kidney disorders leads to dropsy, diabetes, Bright's disease and other fatal diseases.

Sincere, honest testimony like the following should convince every skeptic.

A. C. Sprague, stock dealer, of Normal, Ill., writes: "For two whole years I was doing nothing but buying medicines to cure my kidneys. I do not think that any man ever suffered as I did and lived. The pain in my back was so bad that I could not sleep at night. I could not ride a horse and sometimes was unable even to ride in a car. My condition was critical when I sent for Doan's Kidney Pills. I used three boxes and they cured me. Now I can go anywhere and do as much as anybody. I sleep well and feel no discomfort at all."

A. C. SPRAGUE.

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Sprague will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers, price, fifty cents per box.

Letter to A. M. Wyant.

Monessen, Pa.

Dear Sir: As your business is to get people into and out of trouble, suppose you consider their paint; it makes 'em almost as much trouble as money, except of course matrimony.

They buy poor paint a good deal; they don't mean to; they don't know any better; they buy without thinking. Bad paint isn't good. It looks good-enough for a year; then begins to get rusty; but changes so slowly, one don't notice it.

Looking isn't all. The business of paint is to keep a house dry inside, the wood and iron of it; keep it from rotting and rusting. Takes good paint to do it.

Good and bad paint are sold at one price or about that. One can't go by the price at all; as with lawyers, the price has nothing to do with goodness or badness; and costs are worse yet; the painter and sheriff come in for their share.

But the probability is that a man, who paints Devoe, will come out on top.

Yours truly

A RECORD BREAKER

Largest Merchandise Sale in the Last 10 Years, now Going on in Pittsburg.

Pittsburg at present enjoys the honor of having the second greatest sale of merchandise ever held in the United States, and the offering of over half a million dollars worth of fine goods, the entire stock of the Horne-Stewart Co., which was recently purchased by the Rosenbaum Company, both concerns being located in the Smoky City. On the opening day of the sale there were ten times as many customers as could be waited upon. Seven policemen were required to control the crowds, and the doors were closed half the day. The rush on the succeeding days were also great, but was easily handled, Rosenbaum Company have over 2,000 employees, capable of comfortably accommodating 100,000 people aday. The sale is still continuing with great success. It is stated that the better grade of merchandise were never known to be sold for as little as during the Horne Stewart.

Rosenbaum Company have been in business in the heart of Greater Pittsburg for the last 39 years and are considered the most progressive merchants in that place. A feature of the sale has been the enormous attendance of out-of town patrons, folks as far south as Wheeling, as far east as Altoona, and as far north as Erie and Cleveland were seen in abundance, all intent on taking advantage of the extraordinary savings the sale afforded.

Slight Wreck Near Webster.

A slight wreck occurred at the Budd mines Tuesday about noon, resulting in traffic being blocked for about two hours. A large coal car was being placed on the siding, when a break beam dropped, catching on the ties and derailing the cars. A steam derrick was placed in operation and soon had things in good shape again.

Hurt by a Fall.

George Burnett, the 13-year-old son of James Burnett of West Monongahela, had four ribs broken by a fall Tuesday evening. Young Burnett, in company with some other boys, was on top of an old building watching the skaters at the new rink, when the building suddenly collapsed and the boy was caught between two buildings.
